This course will help with the many aspects of sociology in our current day-to-day interactions with the world around us. We will explore our connections from a personal level to a global level through a variety of means. We will address the development, structure and functioning of groups, and how they influence various components of society. Students will be able to identify the differences between individual and structural level factors, and gain knowledge about issues such as culture, socialization, stratification, race and gender, deviance, and many more topics.

ACADEMIC HONESTY POLICY

Central Methodist University believes that honesty throughout life is a significant foundation of character and personal integrity. The University's policy on Academic Honesty applies to all forms of academic work, including but not limited to quizzes and examinations, essays and papers, lab reports, oral presentations, surveys, take-home tests, etc. Every student is responsible for understanding this policy. Academic honesty requires that each person accept the obligation to be truthful in all academic endeavors. To help members of the community understand the implications of academic honesty, the University provides the following explanation of academic dishonesty. Academic dishonesty is any conduct that has either at its intent or its effect (independent of intent) the false representation of a student's academic performance. Academic dishonesty includes, but is not limited to the following:

- 1) Cheating in any form
- 2) Collaborating with others on work to be presented contrary to the stated rules of the course
- 3) Stealing or having unauthorized access to examination or course materials
- 4) Falsifying records, or laboratory or other data
- 5) Submitting work previously presented in another course without the advance consent of the instructor
- 6) Knowingly and intentionally assisting any other student in any act of academic dishonesty (this includes intentionally allowing any other student to use or submit your academic work or performance, or other academic work supplied by you, under a name different from the author of the work), and
- 7) Plagiarism. Plagiarism is a form of cheating and stealing. Plagiarism includes representing as one's own work a paper written in part or in whole by someone else or failing to properly credit ideas or quotations.

Any student found cheating on an exam or plagiarizing work will receive a failing grade for the assignment and potentially the course itself, at the discretion of the instructor.

STUDENT CONDUCT

Students are expected to adhere to the following behavioral expectations. If it arises there are other distracting behavioral patterns existing within the classroom environment, the instructor retains the right to add to this list.

- ✧ No laptop use during class.
- ✧ No cell phone use during class. I do not want to see a cell phone once the bell has rung.
- ✧ No reading materials during class that is not relative to this specific course.
- ✧ Students who arrive late or early should be discrete, and preferably notify me beforehand.
- ✧ Students should not be in class under the influence of illegal substances.
- ✧ Students should not eat or drink noisy items while class is in session.
- ✧ Students should be courteous when others are speaking, including the instructor or classmates. This means do not talk while others are talking.
- ✧ Students will be able to select a seat at the beginning of the term. It is expected that each class period thereafter they will seat themselves in that same chair (e.g., you will have assigned seating, but you get to pick your initial seats). If there is disruptive behavior as a result of your seating (e.g., you sit next to your best friend and chat the entire period), I will reassign your seating position.

ATTENDANCE POLICY

As you will note, attendance and participation are a key component of the class. It is my goal to socialize students about the expectations of a college course. That being said, short of extremely mitigating circumstances, absences from class will not be excused. It is expected that you will contact me (via phone or email) if you have an absence. Not being present will be counted as absent. There are no make-ups on in-class activities if you are absent, unless it is a school-related absence. Occasionally you will need to miss class for school-related absences. In those instances, I will permit students to make up the in-class activities. However, there are certain parameters to that. It is the student's responsibility to find out what was missed (either from me, or from other students) and to get the work to me. I will only accept in-class make-up work within the week it was originally missed (you can fax it to me). E.g, if you miss work from Monday, Wednesday or Thursday, the latest it can be made up is on Friday of that same week.

I will take attendance at the beginning of class. If you are tardy (you were in the bathroom, you forgot your textbook in your locker, you needed to find a pencil, etc), you will still be counted as tardy. If you walk in after I've taken attendance, you will lose points for that day. Please be punctual!

LATE WORK

Late work will be penalized at the rate of 10% per day. If you have extremely mitigating circumstances, you need to convey those to me in writing (email, letter, fax) as soon as possible. I am willing to accommodate those, but you simply must be in communication with me about it.

QUIZ AND EXAM POLICIES

The quizzes and exams will include multiple choice, true/false, and essay questions. You will have one class period to take the exams, and there will be no more than 45 questions on each exam. You may not reference notes or books during the exams. If you cannot take the exam on the scheduled due date, you may need to take a different exam than your classmates. Please make arrangements with me if this is the case. I do not provide study guides for exams.

WRITTEN WORK EXPECTATIONS

All written work, with the exception of in-class assignments where I note otherwise, needs to be typed. I expect papers to be double-spaced, with 1” margins all around (top, bottom and sides). You should use 12 point font for academic papers, and Ariel or Times New Roman typeface. You must proof-read your work before submitting it to me. You will lose points for grammatical or typographical errors. If you perceive writing as a weakness, arrange to peer edit with a classmate or seek assistance from the writing lab. Please use complete sentences, and avoid using text-type, slang or clichés.

NONDISCRIMINATION POLICY

Central Methodist University does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or federally defined disability in its recruitment, admission and retention of students.
